Peace of Napa Style?

You love Napa Valley enough to live there. But you love a lot of the world's loveliest places, so the idea of buying a vacation home in the California Wine Country seems just a touch, well, impractical.

Enter Calistoga Ranch, a private residence club that sells fractional ownerships in 23 distinctive lodges tucked into a Napa Valley canyon on 157 acres of oak woodland and redwood forest. Any one of these designer homes would fetch several million, but you can buy a fractional share for substantially less (starting at just under $500,000) and gain unrestricted scheduled use of the resort for three weeks a year and plenty of opportunities to drop in on shorter notice.

It's like owning a share in a Learjet: Somebody else handles all the hassles and you enjoy all the perks. And Calistoga Ranch has much more than nice places to sleep and entertain: the resort includes a spa, pool, hiking trails, wine cave, and a chef-staffed restaurant.

Calistoga Ranch owner/members are automatically enrolled in the Vintner Program, which provides insider access to some of the biggest names in Wine Country, and the Elite Alliance program lets members bed down at some of the world's finest resorts, like the the Palazzo Tornabuoni in the heart of Florence, Italy, and The Reefs Club in Southampton, Bermuda.

A chef-staffed gourmet restaurant is just one of the perks at Calistoga Ranch, which sells ownership shares in designer homes tucked amid oaks and redwoods in the Napa Valley.

PREMIUM WINE CLUB FROM AUBERGE DU SOLEIL

It's all about the wine in Napa, and now you can have the best of the valley's best shipped to your door, thanks to a new wine club from Auberge du Soleil, the Michelin-rated restaurant/spa/resort and sister property of Calistoga Ranch.

Kris Margerum, the resort's longtime wine director, picks the most distinctive ultra-premium wines available in the valley and the club ships four to six bottles per quarter to club members. Wines range from Cru ($325) to Grand Cru ($1,200).
